

We Could Be Filmstars

“If they made a film of me, would I be sexy then?”
His shy grin’s unsexiness made it sexy for the very first time. Imagine James Franco or Jake Gyllenhaal in dark brown and black looking way too good. Imagine my man normal and real, making film more life-like, just for me, bringing him back to me newly seen, on screen, saying normal things to me, on camera, as audience making it richer, truer. Keeping it real, that’s where the good sex is. And when everyone knows.

“Come here,” I said, “I’ve got something for you...”
They should film us at it. Then we could see.
