

Tiny Vision in the Doorframe

Sunned woodgrain tight to her hips, her form shaped by a wistful urge, an illusion conjured by a sideways glance from the lip of my sight. She, snug in her groove, soft as a newborn's down, sleeps on undisturbed.